By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dive-bombing Israeli jets teamed with heavy artillery to batter Beirut's Palestinian guerrilla core Monday, detonating an ammunition dump and setting off fires across the besieged western sector of the Lebanese capital.

It was the fifth straight day that Israeli air power hammered away at the guerrillas in a new campaign of military pressure aimed at forcing the Palestine Liberation Organization into an agreement to abandon Lebanon, its power base for 12 years.

The PLO said 54 people were killed or wounded in the afternoon air assaults, but it was unable to give a breakdown of deaths and injuries. Rescue teams were searching for victims believed buried in wrecked buildings, the PLO said.

Before Monday's attacks, the PLO said 179 people, mostly civilians, had been killed or wounded in the air assaults. The air raids, which began last Thursday, ended a 27-day Israeli moratorium on aerial bombardment of west Beirut.

At about 9 p.m. Monday, the Israeli jets returned, bombing and rocketing west Beirut in the orange glow of slowly descending flares. Lebanese radio said one area hit was the PLO's administrative center in the southern neighborhood of Fakhra.

The Israelis also again shut off electricity to west Beirut, throwing the switch in an east Beirut substation that controls power to the western sector of the city. A telephone call to the station was answered by an Israeli soldier who said: "I have my orders. I cannot help you. There is no electricity."

Meanwhile, special U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib met for 50 minutes with Jordan's King Hussein in London, presumably to discuss arrangements for evacuating the estimated 8,000 guerrillas from west Beirut and heading out an all-out ground assault by Israel's 35,000 troops. The Israelis invaded Lebanon on June 6 to crush the PLO and later laid siege to west Beirut.

Hussein, in London on a private visit, called the session with Habib "very useful" but refused to say whether Jordan would accept any of the guerrillas. Habib then returned to the Middle East, where he is to meet in Israel today with Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Israeli officials, who accuse the PLO of stalling for time, expressed skepticism about whether Habib would succeed in his mission to get the Palestinian fighters out of Beirut.

Sudanese President Mohammed Gaafar Nimeiri offered on Monday to accept the PLO guerrillas in his northeast African country south of Egypt.

Arafat's PLO document

Sentence creates spit

Blazes plague Western region

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Members of a U.S. congressional delegation appeared divided Monday over a sentence document signed by Yasser Arafat that some contend meets the conditions for U.S. recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

PLO document

The (PLO) clearly are ready to recognize Israel's right to exist," said Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., at a news conference Monday, a day after he obtained the statement from Arafat.

Such PLO acceptance of Israel is a main U.S. prerequisite for dealing with the Palestinian organization, but another congressman in the member delegation called the statement "at best a rehash." It was dismissed in both Washington and Israel.

McCloskey himself acknowledged could have been more explicit and unequivocal.

He said Arafat specified he was endorsing U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, which implies recognition of Israel, only in the context of U.N. resolutions.

Recognition

But neither Israel nor the United States accepts those other resolutions, which call for establishment of a Palestinian state.

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the Arafat statement did not fulfill U.S. conditions for dealing with the PLO. A senior State Department official, who asked not to be identified, noted this formula of "all U.N. resolutions" includes many resolutions the United States has voted against.

Further complicating the issue was a statement by the PLO's observer at the United Nations in New York, Zehdi Terzi, who said Arafat told him in a telephone conversation Sunday night that Resolution 242 was not included in the document signed in Beirut.

But Terzi said Arafat's endorsement did apply to U.N. General Assembly Resolution 181, which calls for separate Jewish and Palestinian states.

A spokesman for the Israeli Foreign Ministry, Avi Pazner, told reporters Israel wants the besieged PLO guerrillas to leave Beirut first.

The Israelis have long maintained they will not deal with the PLO until it renounces terrorism and amends its charter, which calls for replacing the Jewish state with a secular nation of Palestine.

McCloskey first showed the document to reporters Sunday after meeting with Arafat in west Beirut. It read: "Chairman Arafat accepts all U.N. resolutions relevant to the Palestinian question," and was signed: "Y. Arafat, 25-7-82."

U.N. resolutions

At Monday's news conference, held in Christian east Beirut, Reps. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, and Mervyn M. Dymally, D-Calif., also called for U.S. talks with the PLO.

A dissenting view came from Rep. Elliot H. Levitas, D-Ga., who did not join in the meeting with Arafat.

"It is my view that Chairman Arafat's statement," was at best a rehash of what has been said before and at worst an attempt to gain a propaganda maneuver and gain time as well."

PLO, Israel fight 'invisible target'

Israel will find it nearly impossible to root the Palestine Liberation Organization out of west Beirut, or any other place, because it is using guns and bombs against an invisible target, said David B. Galbraith, the resident director of BYU's Jerusalem Center project.

"After all, Israel is fighting an idea. You can't overthrow an idea by military means," he said in a recent speech at the BYU Conference Center.

The PLO's idea, he said, is a homeland for Palestinians displaced by the creation of the state of Israel in 1948, and displaced again after the Six-Day War in 1967.

But Israel has a dilemma because members of the PLO publicly vow that Israel must be destroyed for the idea to come true, he said.

Thousands of Israelis permit Arabs to live peacefully in their midst, he said, but they cannot continue to live with a group that seeks their nation's destruction.

He said the two nations are on course for a "head-on" collision. But it's "not a situation of black and white, right and wrong. It's all shades of gray."

The PLO is composed largely of hard-core opponents to the Israeli state, he said. Their political orientations range from moderate to extremely militant. But many of the Palestinians are not members of that hard core and nearly a million still live in areas the Israelis took over during the 1967 war.

Press reports leave the impression that life in Israel is precarious, but that's not the case, Galbraith said.

Pope wants donkey left in Rio

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Brazilian donkey rode to Pope John Paul II as a gift in a parade in Rio de Janeiro Monday, but the beast's owner weeps. He said he was in St. Peter's Square, demanding the donkey be left to come to Rome.

The 4-year-old donkey, named Jericó, has been the center of a struggle among the Vatican, local church officials and a U.S.-owned shipping company retained to transport the animal.

The donkey's owner, 42-year-old Damiao Galidino Silva, flew here from Rio on Sunday and began a hunger strike at St. Peter's Square, demanding the pontiff accept the animal as a gift in the name of the world's poor.

The Vatican says the pontiff agreed to accept it during his visit to Brazil in July 1980, but wanted creature to remain there. Da Silva, contrary to pope's wishes, has been insisting it be flown to Rome at a cost of about $8,000, Vatican officials said.

Da Silva, a driver for the Brazilian Senate in Brasilia, began his fast under an obelisk at the center of the square.

Dressed in white shirt and beige pants, he repeatedly told his story Monday to bystanders, apparently oblivious to whether listeners understood his rapid Portuguese. He punctuated his tale by weeping and gesturing wildly.

"I can't understand why the Holy See will not accept a donkey, a sacred animal used to carry the Virgin Mary and baby Jesus out of Egypt and which symbolizes poverty and misery in the world," da Silva told a reporter.

"It's a matter of honor. I intend to stay here on a hunger strike until the pope gives me a positive response," he said.

Da Silva said he made up the creature's name by putting together "Jequé," which means donkey in the local dialect of northeast Brazil, with the English word "car." He said he made up this name because he believes the donkey is the vehicle of the poor.

One Vatican official said the pope, after being told of the gift, had instructed that the animal be sent to a local Roman Catholic institute in Rio de Janeiro to save the transportation cost.

"But as far as we know, the man never complied, insisting that the animal be brought here," said the Vatican official, who asked not to be identified.

He said da Silva, with help from Bishop Newton de Almeida, secretary of then Brazilian Episcopal Conference, and friends, raised the money to send the donkey to Rome. Da Silva's efforts received widespread publicity in Brazil, and last month local church officials authorized delivery of the beast to the Vatican.

But their decision was again overruled by John Paul, who suggested that the money would be better spent on poor people.

Manager Karl Heinz Koval of the moving company, Brazilian subsidiary of the U.S.-owned Fink Transport, said his firm paid for da Silva's air ticket to Rome and the donkey's transportation to Rio.

Firefighters brought a 300-acre fire in the Devil's Slide area of Morgan County under control late Sunday and began mopping up scattered hot spots this morning as fires continued to burn throughout the West.

Tom Adams, a dispatcher for the Interagency Fire Center in Salt Lake City, said about 35 firefighters battled the blaze in Morgan County, which was started late Saturday night by lightning.

A team of firefighters from Utah State Prison also helped snuff the flames.

The fire, located near Crofton, burned mostly rangeland, Adams said.

"Surrendered firefighters brought under control a fire that scorched 6,580 acres in the Champlin Peak area 25 miles northeast of Delta.

Jim Soter, manager of the Interagency Fire Center, said the blaze apparently started about 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, when a hot bearing fell from a truck.

Meanwhile, fire crews battled a 100-acre fire near Delle, about 30 miles west of Salt Lake City, and Interagency Fire Center officials were dispatched to size up a wildland fire sparked by lightning Thursday afternoon just east of Tooele.

The Tooele county sheriff's office said the fire was located in Settlement Canyon about two miles southeast of the city.

Another blaze charred about 10,000 acres of the Great Salt Lake's Antelope Island.

About 55 firefighters Friday threw a six-mile fire line around the blaze. Firefighters were "attempting to burn back through a portion of area left between the north fire line and the fire itself" in an effort to hold the fire within the line, said Martha Burdette, Interagency Fire Center spokeswoman.

The fire had not harmed the 20 to 40 transplanted buffalo and a deer herd that are on the island, she said.

In Nevada today about 200 firefighters tried to encircle a forest fire that has burned 6,800 acres of pinon, juniper and ponderosa pine on rugged terrain near the Spring Mountain Range about 50 miles west of Las Vegas.

In California, about 800 firefighters worked with hand tools, trying to contain a blaze from a campfire that devastated 2,900 pristine acres of the Klamath National Forest, about 20 miles south of the Oregon border.

Nine people have been injured fighting the Nevada blaze, called the worst forest fire of the season in the West. Among the nine were six U.S. Forest Service firefighters, who suffered minor injuries Saturday in the crash of a helicopter being used to combat the fire.

Trenches had been dug around 90 percent of the blaze by late Sunday. "It's difficult just working and getting around in that kind of terrain," said Steve Weiss, a federal Bureau of Land Management spokesman.

The helicopter crashed overnight during heavy rains that slowed the spreading of flames but also impeded firefighting efforts.

In California, more sophisticated assaults on the fire have been unsuccessful because the terrain is virtually impassable. Helicopters, bulldozers and other firefighting equipment. Pack mules were being used to ferry supplies.

Uinta fires damage 1,000 acres

About 1,000 acres in Uinta National Forest have burned since July 10 because of man-made fires.

Lyndy Gomm, Uinta National Forest fire officer, said the potential for damage to resources, property and loss of life has increased with the current fire danger.

Some of the fires may have been started from firecrackers and carelessness," said Vera Crandall, Uinta National Forest spokeswoman. "Carelessness and arson are being investigated."

If arson or carelessness is proved, the person responsible will have to pay the cost of containing the fire, Crandall said.

A quarter-acre fire along the Wasatch Front could cost from $2,000 to $3,000, according to Crandall.

The Wasatch Front is covered with critical "winter range" for deer. When this grass is burned, it is replaced by cheat grass, which is not a food for deer, but is more easily burned — compounding fire hazards, said Crandall.

Presently, total costs for containing the Uinta National Forest fires are estimated at between $30,000 and $60,000, according to Crandall.

Lower prices, shorter wait

'Quick-stop' clinics give hospitals competition

DALLAS (AP) — Texas leads the nation in the spread of quick-stop medical clinics, which are giving hospitals a run for their money by offering people lower prices and a shorter wait for treatment in minor emergencies.

But some critics call the clinics "7-Eleven medicine" or "Doc-in-the-Boxes," references to grocery stores and fast-food chains. They worry that seriously ill or injured people might suffer if they go to the clinics instead of receiving the care that only a hospital emergency room can provide.

"A guy may have chest pains and wind up there 20 minutes after the doors are closed," said Dr. Ken Gray, president of the American College of Emergency Physicians in Irving, Texas.

Similar fears are voiced by Ralph Cross, an officer with Methodist Central Hospital in Dallas.

"Our only concern is the use of the term 'emergency,'" Cross said. "The public equates 'emergency' with an emergency room open 24 hours a day with the backup facilities of a hospital. There is the real possibility to confuse or mislead."

Most of the clinics in the Dallas area are open seven days a week, 12 hours a day. Some never close. Doctors are on duty when the clinics are open, though not all are specialists in emergency care.

The College of Emergency Physicians estimates that Texas has 70 of the nation's 575 minor emergency clinics, more than any other state. Dallas got its first clinic in 1978.

An owner of one of the Dallas-area clinics said his clinic has had only two patients who would have been more properly treated at a hospital emergency room.

The patients — heart attack victims who didn't think they had time to make it to a hospital — were stabilized and sent by ambulance to a hospital, said Dr. Ron Hellstrom, who owns the Primacare Minor Emergency Facility in Carrollton.

"From our experience, we have found that people gauge very well what is wrong with them," Hellstrom said.

However, according to a 1980 study by the College of Emergency Physicians, 25 percent of all patients who enter emergency rooms underestimate the urgency of their need for care.

President Kimball part of parade

SALT LAKE CITY — Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball, who has appeared in public since he had surgery last year, rode Saturday in a parade here commemorating the arrival of Mormon pioneers in Salt Lake Valley.

President Kimball, wearing a western hat, appeared feeble as he waved haltingly to spectators from the back seat of a sedan near the head of the annual Days of '47 parade.

Church spokesman Jerry Cahill said President Kimball's health is "fairly good. It's a day-to-day thing."

Watt letter to Israel causes 'flap'

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary James Watt, embroiled in domestic controversies since taking office, on Saturday found himself in a foreign policy flap over a letter he sent to the Israeli ambassador saying U.S. support for Israel could be jeopardized if Jewish liberals oppose the Reagan administration's energy initiatives.

The letter provoked outcries from American Jewish leaders and resulted in calls for Watt's resignation from two congressmen.

Trial to 'shake CIA foundations'

WASHINGTON — A defense attorney has said that former CIA agent Edwin Wilson's trial on charges of aiding Libyan terrorists will reveal sensitive information that "will shake the CIA to its foundations and perhaps even the government itself."

Level of Great Salt Lake rising

SALT LAKE CITY — Officials monitoring the Great Salt Lake are becoming concerned about its rising level. Stan Elmer of the state Division of Lands and Forestry said the lake has risen almost three feet in the last year, reaching 4,201 feet above sea level.

An early fall, which would reduce evaporation, and a wet winter and spring could put the lake above the 1976 peak that brought $12 million damage, he said.

Torture may not affect U.S. aid

WASHINGTON — The Salvadoran police tortured a relief agency volunteer in May, prompting the U.S. ambassador to warn that such actions could jeopardize American support for military aid to the war-torn country, State Department officials said Monday.

The warning came to light as the Reagan administration prepared to certify that the Salvadoran government was making progress in human rights, a congressional requirement for continuation of this year's $81 million in U.S. military assistance.

Ace Israeli combat officer resigns to protest invasion

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A young Israeli combat officer resigned his post to protest the Lebanon invasion despite Prime Minister Menachem Begin's personal attempts to dissuade him, aides to Begin said Monday.

They refused to comment on the political implications of Col. Eli Geva's unprecedented action, which anti-war campaigners said illustrated the eroding public support for the invasion.

"He (Geva) asked to see the prime minister and he did," Begin aide Yehiel Kadishai told The Associated Press. "He is a free man. He asked to be relieved, and he was relieved."

Israeli newspapers said Geva asked last week to be relieved of his command of an elite armored brigade in Lebanon rather than be forced to disobey possible orders to attack Beirut.

"I don't have the courage to look bereaved parents in the face and tell them their son fell in an operation which, in my opinion, we could have done without," the daily Yedioth Ahronoth quoted Geva as telling his superiors.

The 32-year-old Geva was one of the youngest brigade commander in modern Israeli history. The son of a retired Maj. Gen. Yosef Geva, he considered a gifted soldier with a brilliant future.

Geva led Israel's attack on Lebanese city of Sidon and his brigade is now encamped near Beirut ready to descend on the city if order comes.

Newspaper reports said he initially supported the June 6 invasion, began to have doubts when it loomed from a border-securing operation into an all-out effort to expel the Palestine Liberation Organization from Lebanon.

Orem Police re-enact robbery

By MARTHA REDO Staff Writer

An Orem Police officer was held up Wednesday morning in front of 20 witnesses at the Orem City Center. The simulated robbery was part of a two-hour seminar designed for businesses and offered by the Orem Police Department.

Cpl. Jay Fletcher of the Orem Police Department has been teaching crime prevention for four of the seven years he has been with the department. Fletcher presented a lecture and demonstration on prevention and precautions involving armed robberies.

It is important for people to be prepared for a robbery because even if all preventive measures are followed, there is no guarantee against robbery, Fletcher said.

In recognizing a thief, Fletcher said to be aware of body language and notice the way a person carries himself.

If someone is in the store and is more interested in the people in the store than he is in the merchandise, he said, "you probably have a robber or shoplifter."

Another thing he said to look for is a person dressed incorrectly for the season or any other peculiarities.

When a robbery does occur, Fletcher said, only 20 to 30 seconds elapse between the time the robber initiates the act and leaves.

The simulated robbery Fletcher set up was to see if those in attendance could give a description of the "robber."

The robber barged into the room with a gun and asked Fletcher to put his hands up and give him his wallet. The robber demanded everyone in the room to be quiet and not move. After getting Fletcher's wallet, he fired three shots with a starter gun, which has a closed barrel.

All in attendance were asked to describe the robber and were told "the worst thing to do is compare notes with others; the officer wants your description," Fletcher said.

Fletcher said robbers are sly, and often only the person being held up knows it is happening. He warned employees to "not get so caught up with your customer that you can't look around."

The last chance you have to get a look at the robber, Fletcher said, is as he goes out the door. After he leaves the alarm should be sounded again, "then you call the police and stay on the line until they arrive."

Fletcher said robberies seem as if they are not real. "Don't be a hero," he said. Often people get nervous and make a scene, and by doing this they in a sense create the problem. "The robber is scared to death. The best thing to do is to be a good witness," Fletcher said.

Store robbed; two flee with $300

Orem police are still looking for two men who robbed an Orem shoe store and held two women at gunpoint Saturday morning.

According to Orem Police reports, two men came into Payless Shoes, 1481 S. State, Orem, at 9:30 a.m. and held the store clerk and a customer at gunpoint, demanding money from the cash drawer. The report said the men got away with more than $300.

After receiving the money, the robbers took the two women into a back room and tied their hands, the report said.

When the men left, the store clerk called the police. She then heard a car engine start and went to the front of the store where she saw two people in a late model pickup truck leaving northbound on State Street, according to the report.

One of the men is described in the report as 5-foot-8-inches to 5-foot-10-inches tall, with sandy hair, red sideburns, a moustache and glasses, the report said.

The other man is described as 5-foot-6-inches to 5-foot-7-inches tall with wavy dark hair and a moustache.

$5,000 worth of bikes reported missing at Y

Since April, 48 bicycles, with an estimated total value in excess of $5,000, have been reported missing at BYU, according to University Police Chief Robert W. Kelschaw.

Only five of the 48 bicycles that have been reported stolen were secured with a lock and chain, Kelschaw said.

"Since June 22, we have had 13 bicycles reported stolen — that's a rate of about one bicycle stolen every other day," he said.

"I am very concerned as to the number of bicycle thefts that are being reported to this department," he said.

In an attempt to prevent more bicycles from being stolen, Kelschaw said he is starting an aggressive enforcement program that will be effective immediately.

The Aggressive Action Program is not intended to harass or interfere with anyone's normal activities. It is purely a means to reduce the number of thefts," Kelschaw said.

Employees from the traffic and criminal division will be patrolling the campus, he said. Both police officers in uniform and in plain clothes will be riding bicycles and motorcycles, and patrolling on foot to question bikers, Kelschaw said.

Kelschaw said that in the past, about 99 percent of the people who have been approached and asked to identify themselves and provide proof of ownership have been cooperative and appreciative of the fact that BYU police take the time to prevent the thefts from recurring.

Occasionally, however, some people have felt it was an act of harassment, he said.

"I ask for the cooperation of all owners and riders of bicycles to cooperate with my staff if and when they are approached and asked to identify themselves and to provide the serial number of the bicycles they are riding," said Kelschaw.

The majority of the bicycles stolen on campus were taken from areas other than housing, he said. There are no set patterns for the recurring thefts, he said. "It is speculation that the bikes are probably being taken by youths visiting the campus," he said.

Philosophy ideas give G.E. faculty better 'perspective'

Several lectures about the philosophy of history and science were presented in the J. Reuben Clark Building last week as part of a seminar sponsored by the BYU General Education program. BYU faculty members who teach general-education classes were invited to attend the week-long seminar, said William E. Evenson, director of the G.E. program.

The purpose of the seminar was to broaden the background and perspective of the faculty who teach general-education courses, he said.

The highlight of the seminar was guest lecturer R. Erman McMullin, professor of philosophy at Notre Dame University, Evenson said.

McMullin's presentations dealt with ideas about the philosophy of science between 1920 and 1950, Evenson said. However, the emphasis of his presentations was new ideas that have developed about the philosophy of science since 1950.

Elder Maxwell praises pioneers' virtues

Elder Neal A. Maxwell of the LDS Council of the Twelve addresses an early Saturday morning audience at the Salt Lake Tabernacle. Maxwell praised the pioneers for having stayed on the straight-and-narrow path. The address launched the Days of '47 celebration in Salt Lake City.

'Near-misses' discouraged for motorists, pedestrians

Several near-misses have occurred in the last few months involving motorists and pedestrians, according to University Police Chief Robert Kelshaw.

"Motorists are not stopping for pedestrians in the crosswalks, and pedestrians are stepping out directly in front of motorists and expecting them to immediately stop," Kelshaw said.

He said pedestrians who step into the crosswalk when a car is five feet away and expect the driver to stop are not reasonable.

Auto Shop ready for stranded cars

Students and faculty stranded by car problems during school hours can call the Auto Shop at Ext. 5512, according to University Police.

Capt. Wes Sherwood said motorists with dead batteries or with keys locked inside cars should contact the shop during business hours because police are busy handling other calls and are unable to handle the large number of people who need these services.

Patrol Sgt. Greg Barber said that even after hours motorists may want to call a friend when stranded, as police are often busy and may not be able to respond quickly.

'Culture Vulture' to prey on students

To increase student awareness concerning cultural activities on campus, the ASBYU Culture Office will adopt a mascot, according to Ronda Randall, culture office vice president.

The mascot will be called the Culture Vulture, Randall said. This slang word is defined in Webster's New World Dictionary as "a person who professes great interest in culture and the arts."

Randall said the purpose of the Cul-

Alpine board revises its rules

New policies were adopted by the Alpine School District at a board meeting last week.

Board members met in an executive session where new policies concerning employee purchasing and district vehicle use were adopted.

The board passed a proposal prohibiting employees of the school district from purchasing items from the district's central warehouse.

A second proposal adopted prohibits the use of district vehicles for personal and private use. The superintendent and assistants have had the use of district vehicles for personal use in the past.

Miss Canada crowned Miss Universe of 1982

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Karen Dianne Baldwin, an 18-year-old university student from Canada, was crowned Miss Universe 1982 at the annual pageant held Monday night in this South American capital city.

Miss Guam, Patty Chong Kerkos, 18, was second; Miss Italy, Cruzia Frowleptou, 21, was third; Miss Greece, Tina Rossou, 19, fourth; and Miss U.S.A., Terri Utey, a 20-year-old from Cabot, Ark., who works in sales and public relations, was fifth.

Nostalgia is not enough in honoring the pioneers, said Elder Neal A. Maxwell of the LDS Council of Twelve at a Saturday sunrise service in the Salt Lake Tabernacle.

Elder Maxwell told the audience of early-risers at the Kickoff event of the Days of '47 celebration in Salt Lake City that the only real veneration of the pioneers is expressed by emulation. He said an admiring pause out of one's daily routine to honor the pioneers is not enough.

"Like the pioneers," he said, "we should be able to perform our equivalent of picking up our handcart and heading west."

Purpose

"Pioneers knew who they were; hence, they knew where they were going, and it was not just to the valley of the Great Salt Lake," Elder Maxwell said.

"President Brigham Young in saying of this valley that, 'this is the place,' nevertheless knew that this place, like Winter Quarters, was a needed pause, but not a final destination in God's scheme of things with the saints. There would be another gathering before the throne of God," Elder Maxwell said.

Journey

"The pioneers surely understood that mortality is a proving process, not a place. Hence, President Young at any point in their journey could have justifiably said, 'this is the process,' as well as later said, 'this is the place,'" Elder Maxwell said.

He told the audience, who filled the main floor of the Tabernacle, that the pioneers were "anchored into the eternal realities. Our locations may vary, but the chores that go with the process of mortality are quite constant," he said.

"In God's plan, our location is less important than our direction," he said. "Thus, latitude does not matter nearly as much as one's attitude."

Renounce

"We are not asked to renounce our creature comforts," he said, "but rather we are to take these for being more than they are."

Referring to the preservation of historic buildings, Elder Maxwell said it was right and commendable to concern one's self with such preservation. However, he said, "such architectural reminders are not a substitute for improving the architecture of our individual souls."

"Unfortunately, today some seek to substitute correcting artifacts for the giving of quiet Christian service," he said.

Values

In various ways, the commendable interest in things of the past sometimes "finds us, in the words of Jacob, 'looking beyond the mark,'" he said.

"Therefore, while we need to be cautious about demolishing historic buildings," he said, "we should even be more cautious about demolishing traditional values."

The pioneers are celebrated as pathfinders, Elder Maxwell said. "Let us also honor them even more for having stayed on the straight-and-narrow path of which there is only one."

U.S. gets 7th straight victory

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd continued America's dominance of the Federation Cup on Sunday when they swept singles matches against West Germany to give the United States its seventh straight triumph.

Navratilova, who led Czechoslovakia to victory in 1975 shortly before she defected to the United States, raised both arms in celebration after she defeated Bettina Bunge 6-4, 6-4 to clinch the match and become the first player to win for two nations. The world's two top women players had to struggle against the German teen-agers.

Bunge, 19, fought off one match point in the eighth game of the second set, then broke the three-time Wimbledon champion.

Navratilova, 25, ran out the match on her next service, winning at love when she smacked a backhand volley out of Bunge's reach for the final point.

Lloyd found her rhythm in the second set against 6-foot Claudia Kohde and began to dictate the tempo of the match. As Lloyd grew stronger, the 18-year-old German weakened in the hot midday sun, and Lloyd earned a 2-6, 6-1, 6-3 triumph.

Kohde was superb at the net in the opening set.

DMSO studies continue

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A controversial chemical, regarded by some athletes and arthritis sufferers as a "wonder drug," is getting one of its first comprehensive tests at Duke University and eight other U.S. centers.

Dimethyl sulfoxide, widely used as an industrial solvent, has gained a reputation as a pain reliever — a reputation which the U.S. Food and Drug Administration found to have little scientific justification.

Researchers at Duke University's Center for Cooperative Study of Rheumatic Diseases will test DMSO as a way to treat scleroderma, a rheumatic disease characterized by hardening of the skin and loss of joint mobility.

Comprehensive study

"This will be the first comprehensive scientific study to see if DMSO is really effective for the treatment of scleroderma," said Dr. Ralph Snyderman, chief of Duke's division of rheumatic and genetic diseases.

Duke will pool its results with those from Johns Hopkins University, the National Institutes of Health, the University of Alabama, the University of Utah, the University of Washington, the University of California at Los Angeles, the University of New York and the University of Cincinnati.

The work was made possible by a five-year, $400,000 grant from NIH.

Nine centers

"The most successful way to find new therapies for these diseases is through cooperating clinics," Snyderman said. "These nine large centers will be studying the same drugs at the same time, which means new therapies can be found much quicker than if one center worked alone."

Couples clinch wins in bowling tournament

By BOB MURRI Staff Writer

Two BYU couples cleared the lanes to win first- and second-place trophies in the No Tap Bowling Tournament on Wednesday night.

Out of 10 couples, Marv and Jan Thurston rolled to place first with a total of 1,027 points.

"I enjoy bowling and thought playing in the tournament would be a fun thing to do," said Mrs. Thurston, a sophomore from Bountiful, majoring in elementary education.

She scored 155 in her first and second games and finished with 165. Thurston bowled 197 in his first game, followed by 186, and finished with 169.

Higher

"I haven't bowled a lot, but I thought if I bowled every week for six weeks in the BYU Games Center tournaments, I'd be able to score higher than my wife," said Thurston, a senior from Provo, majoring in American studies.

"I got quite a few normal strikes, but the No Tap rule worked out great for me," he said.

"We were happy to find out we won the tournament. We heard about the tournament in The Daily Universe and because my wife loves to bowl, we go every chance we get," said Thurston.

Second

Guy and Tami Laing

finished second in the tournament with a score of 943.

Laing bowled 176, 146 and finished strong with the men's high score of the night, 218.

"I enjoy bowling," said Laing, a senior from Powell, Wyo., majoring in marketing and business management. "I have bowled since I was 8 years old, was president of three different BYU bowling leagues and have won several tournaments; Tami and I are shooting for first place in this week's Head Pin Tournament."

Mrs. Laing, a junior from Phoenix, Ariz., with an undeclared major, rolled 115, 117 and finished with 171.

Head Pin

Applications are being taken in the BYU Games Center for the Head Pin Tournament scheduled for Wednesday night, said Shafter Brown, BYU Games Center manager.

Only a limited number of patients, admitted by physician referrals, will be studied at first.

The FDA has so far approved DMSO for use by humans only when applied by a doctor for a bladder condition, FDA officials said Monday. Special FDA approval was required for the NIH study.

Scientists also will study a drug called methotrexate as a treatment for rheumatoid arthritis, a common inflammatory disease that can lead to the destruction of joints, officials said.

WRITING THE AUSTRALIAN CRAWL

As a poet, William Stafford is concerned with ecology, humanitarian interests, the preservation of Western American culture, the machinations of writers in San Francisco, the Whitmanesque poetry of the poets of Denver, and the brilliant scenery of the south west. More important still, William Stafford shows through his own writing that Western American literature has reached artistic maturity. He was the 1963 winner of the National Book Award for Poetry.

Freshman joins two Y teams

By M. JOE SMITH
Staff Writer

BYU coaches have recruited a 6-foot-5-inch, 280-pound, high school All-American heavyweight wrestler to wrestle and play football, said Roger French, BYU's offensive line coach.

Doug Rawlinson, from Tulsa, Okla., said he was recruited by several collegiate teams, including the Oklahoma Sooners and the Oklahoma State Cowboys of the Big Eight conference. He will attend YU this fall. His brother, Randy, also plays football for BYU.

During Rawlinson's junior year in high school, he went undefeated in the heavyweight wrestling division and captured the Oklahoma State heavyweight championship, he said.

At one time during Rawlinson's wrestling career, he pinned 50 opponents in 50 matches, a record, according to Fred Davis, BYU's head wrestling coach.

Wrestling upset
The only blemish on Rawlinson's record during his senior year came during the Oklahoma state wrestling championships. Rawlinson was up against a wrestler he had previously beaten six matches in a row, but was defeated in what was considered an upset.

When asked about the defeat, Rawlinson said, "I was just not in the right frame of mind. I had consistently been able to handle this guy, but I simply wasn't mentally prepared. It's really depressing to go undefeated all season and then have it end like that."

Regardless of the loss, Rawlinson was named to several high school All-American teams and finished his high school wrestling career with an 87-3 record during three years of competition.

BYU wrestling and football coaches said they are happy about Rawlinson's decision to attend BYU, since Oklahoma and Oklahoma State are consistently ranked among the five best wrestling powers in the United States.

The decision to attend BYU was a tough one to make because of the caliber of the Oklahoma wrestling programs, said Rawlinson. "I was looking for a school that had an excellent football and wrestling team, and the Oklahoma schools certainly had them, but so does BYU. Probably the turning point was my brother's persuasion and the fact that I am LDS."

French and Davis said they recruited Rawlinson out of high school.

According to French, Rawlinson has the makings to become an excellent offensive tackle. French said, "Rawlinson has all the qualities to become a potentially great football player. He has the size and good balance, but his best asset is his quick feet and agility, which he has developed through wrestling."

Good Skills

Davis calls Rawlinson an excellent prospect with good skills. "Doug is just a young kid at the age of 18, but we have some high hopes for him. He will have to prove himself, but we feel that he will make a big impact on the quality of our wrestling team."

Rawlinson is one of five outstanding young freshmen wrestlers who will be attending BYU this fall, said Davis. "We have won the WAC in wrestling 14 out of the last 18 years, and we feel that Doug can help continue our winning tradition."

French said Rawlinson needs some work to increase his strength but is quite young and will have time to develop. "We will have Doug on the weights just as soon as he arrives for summer workouts."

Rawlinson said he will be reporting for summer football practice on Aug. 9.

Wyoming assistant coach moved to full-time status

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Jay Schaa, assistant football coach at the University of Wyoming, has been moved from part-time status to full-time, head coach Al Kincaid announced.

Schaa, who has been at Wyoming for three years, replaces Jack Krowe, who accepted a similar position in March at Auburn University, where former Wyoming coach Pat Dye went in January 1981.

The Evergreen, Colo., native played strong safety, running back and quarterback for the Cowboys before earning a degree in physical education at Wyoming in 1979. After graduation, he accepted a job as part-time receiver coach for the Cowboys and handled coaching for running backs during spring practice after Krowe's departure.

"Jay was in a tough position this spring — taking over the running backs during the first couple of days of practice," Kincaid said when he made the announcement Thursday.

Officials say defector 'lured'

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Angry International Tennis Federation officials said today they suspect a professional coach or agent lured away China's top female player, who disappeared during tournament here.

In San Francisco, a source at the Immigration and Naturalization Service said Saturday the agency had been contacted about granting political asylum to a woman, 19, who missed last week during the Federation Cup tennis tournament.

Represent woman

The source, who did not want to be identified, said the contact came from "people trying to represent" the woman. "They have to come up with an application or anything," he said.

Later Sunday, David W. Hays, general secretary of the International Tennis Federation, said: "Chinese law firm in San Francisco is acting on behalf of her. The firm has contacted the State Department and asked it to release the Chinese consulate that a girl is safe. We expect to have a meeting with the law firm and officials of the State Department on Monday."

Chinese
Earlier, the Chinese consul in San Francisco appealed to the State Department for help in finding Hu, a 5-foot-8 native of Szechwan who speaks no English.

"If you find the right coach or agent, you'll probably find the girl," said Gray.

Slave

"It's not unusual for coaches and agents to be at events like this looking for young talent, but this smacks of the slave trade, snatching bodies from other countries," said another official of the federation, who requested anonymity.

Only clue

The only clue to Hu's whereabouts, Gray said, was an anonymous telephone call to the hotel where she was staying, during which the caller said, "The girl is at a safe house and wants to seek political asylum."

Statement

Before returning home Saturday, the Chinese Women's Team issued a statement Saturday, saying it was "shocked" over Hu's disappearance and adding,

"Naturally we expect protection of our personal safety from the U.S. side."

Last seen

Hu was last seen Tuesday night when one of her teammates at the 32-nation tournament saw her, still dressed, reading in bed in their hotel room, Gray said.

The teammate fell asleep and when she woke up the next morning, Hu was gone.

Y to present prize-winning comedy

By STEPHANIE SPELLMAN
Staff Writer

The 1986 Pulitzer Prize-winning comedy, "You Can't Take It With You," will be the final production for the 1981-1982 Pardoe Theater season.

According to Jean Jenkins, director of the production, "You Can't Take It With You" is a good summer play because it's a happy one. "It's a marvelous play for the general public," Jenkins said. "People can relate to it."

The play revolves around the zany Vanderhof and Sycamore families. "Grandpa Vanderhof is the type of person who thinks everything is wonderful," Jenkins said. "Grandpa decided 35 years before that he wasn't having any fun, so he now does what he wants to do," Jenkins said. "Grandpa collects snakes and attends commencement exercises."

The household includes, among others, a practicing ballerina and her instructor, a printer, an artist at work, a pyrotechnician, a delivery man who came and ended up staying and a disinherited Russian princess.

Jenkins said the play is about people who love and respect each other without being judgmental. "There is no great philosophical message behind it," she said.

"The theme of the play, as Grandpa tells us, is that life is kind of beautiful if you just let it come to you."

This idea is explained by Grandpa to the establishment-oriented Kirby, whose son wants to marry into the crazy Sycamore family.

Kirby and his wife get a wild introduction to the future in-laws when they come to dinner on the wrong night. "They see the household as it really is, and the fireworks fly," said Jenkins.

"It's a very tender play," Jenkins said. "I think there's not enough plays done like this — hopeful plays — full of optimism. It's really a play of idealism and sentimental optimism."

Jenkins, who directed "A Marriage-Go-Round" and "Anastasia," said that in this play, either all the characters are stars or none are.

She said that when she auditions students, there are many elements that determine who receives a role. Voice projection, diction, diaphragmatic control, good range and tone are some of the qualities she looks for in auditions. "I look for good voices," Jenkins said.

As director, Jenkins said she is involved in all aspects of the play. She works with the designers and technicians and has almost total control. Jenkins said, "A director depends on technicians to a great extent."

She said "You Can't Take It With You" has taken four weeks to produce. "We've been rehearsing every day. The students are very dedicated, and my cast has been just great. An important part of doing a play is having the cast work together."

"You Can't Take It With You" will be presented in the Pardoe Theater HFAC on Thursday through Saturday and Aug. 3-7 and 10-14 at 8 p.m., with 1 p.m. matinees on Aug. 9 and 14.

The play will also be a featured production during Education Week on Aug. 24-27 at 7:30 p.m.

Cast members of the comedy "You Can't Take It With You," Mark Bachan as Mr. Kolenkhov, Greg Peters as Grandpa and Randy King as Mr. Kirby, act out an argument during the dinner scene of the production. The comedy revolves around two families and their zany antics. The comedy begins Thursday in the Pardoe Theater HFAC at 8 p.m.

—PEOPLE— 'Eyeful' of stunts given by Taiwanese acrobats

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock singer Andy Gibb says he wants to go public about his now-finished romance with actress Victoria Principal so his fans will understand what he's been going through.

Gibb said Friday on ABC's "Good Morning America" program that his relationship with Principal, of the TV-series "Dallas," was "very much a sweet dream of a relationship, and it was also a nightmare at points."

When the two finally broke up, said Gibb, he suffered a nervous breakdown and "gave up everything . . . I didn't care about life." After flirting with cocaine use, Gibb said, he ended up one night crying his eyes out to his parents, who urged him to see a psychiatrist.

Since then, Gibb said, he has stopped using all drugs and he wants his fans to know "exactly what happened to me." He also said his fans "should not do this to themselves."

Gibb's breakdown also resulted in his being fired as host of the syndicated music show "Solid Gold."

TORONTO (AP) — Actor Hal Linden, who for eight years starred as a police captain on the "Barney Miller" television series, says he's "a big fan of cops."

Linden was made honorary chief of detectives of the Metropolitan Toronto Police at a light-hearted ceremony Friday.

Brought to Toronto with his wife as guests of the Toronto police amateur athletic association, Linden told reporters that playing the series made him appreciate police work.

"It's a very difficult job and, of course, an immensely important and necessary job," he said.

Twenty-nine acrobats from Taiwan performed in the de Jong Concert Hall on Friday evening and gave the sellout crowd an eyeful of incredible Chinese entertainment.

From beginning to end, the Chinese Young Acrobats of Taiwan kept the audience on the edges of their seats as the acrobats accomplished numerous spectacular feats.

The acrobats, some as young as 5 and none older than 18, seemed to thrive on the audience's excitement, repeating acts that did not turn out flawlessly at first.

The acrobats often solicited applause with mimed prayers and heartbeats before attempting difficult tricks.

Chinese acrobatics has its origin in the ancient dynasties of Ch'in and Han, which flourished in the centuries just before and after Christ.

Much of the flavor of those eras came through in the performance as the acrobats juggled heavy urns and balanced barrels on their feet.

Utah Symphony to lose conductor

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Symphony's board of directors has voted not to extend the contract of Varujan Kojian, the music director and conductor, said W. Boyd Christensen, symphony executive vice president and chief operating officer.

Christensen declined to comment on why the board voted not to renew Kojian's contract, and Kojian said he would have no comment "until the board has given me its reason for its action."

Kojian has been music director and conductor since November 1979.

Earlier this year, Robert Henderson resigned as associate conductor to devote more time to his job as music director of the Arkansas Symphony in Little Rock.
